

We are looking for young people from a refugee background to take part in a short online survey about how they use public spaces

Researchers from Flinders University are conducting research about refugee young peoples' experiences of public spaces (e.g. shopping centres, parks, sporting grounds, public transport) and what the impacts on health and wellbeing might be.

We would like to hear from you if you:

- Are from a refugee background
- Are aged 16-24
- Live in South Australia

The survey will take approximately 20 minutes and is anonymous. Taking part is completely voluntary.

We will ask you questions about your experiences of public spaces (e.g. physical design features, your social interactions with others in public space and exchanges with policing/security).

As a thank you for taking part in the research, you will receive a $15 shopping voucher once you have completed the survey.
